Biographical/Historical Note:	Becky Heron (b. November 11, 1927, d. January 23, 2014) served as a member of the Durham County Board of Commissioners from 1982 to 2011. She was the first female to serve as chair of the board, a position she held for two years. Before her election to the board, she served on the Zoning and Planning Commission for six years. Her political efforts focused on environmental protection, smart growth efforts in the Triangle area, the promotion of services for the elderly, and advocacy for the ethical treatment of animals. During her service, she supported the Animal Protection Society of Durham and Durham's Senior Center. She argued for the protection of the Eno River during a time of urban expansion, supported the controversial land transfer tax, and opposed the 751 South development near Jordan Lake. Among her awards are Outstanding County Commissioner and Outstanding Senior Citizen. She was also named one of the ten most powerful women in the Triangle area. She resigned in 2011 and was succeeded by Pam Karriker. Following her death, county manager Michael Ruffin ordered flags flown at half-mast at county facilities in her honor.
Condition Notes:
Organization of Collection:	The collection is organized by entities that Becky Heron was involved in, primarily the Durham County Board of Commissioners, but also Animal Control and Protection, Triangle J Council of Governments, and several other local and statewide organizations. Within these groupings, the materials are organized alphabetically. Heron's primary focuses as a commissioner, such as development in Durham and mental health, have been pulled out into their own subseries within the Board of Commissioners files.
