Biographical / Historical

While we know the LGBTQ community existed in Durham before the 1970s, little documentation exists. This collection documents the community as it moved more into the public eye, particularly after the Little River beatings on April 12, 1981. Durham County Library North Carolina Collection staff and community partners have created a website exhibit that details the history of the community in Durham that can be found here: durhamlgbtqhistory.org

^ Return to Table of Contents

Scope and Contents

The LGBTQ Collection is an artificial collection consisting of materials from the following donors: Joanne Abel, Carol Anderson, Betsy Barton, Nancy Blood, Richard Dillwood and Carrie Hart, Durham County Library North Carolina Collection, Meredith Emmett, Joseph Fedrowitz, Mindy Fraiser, Amy Glaser, Lucy Harris, Luke Hirst, Holly Jordan, Collin Lee (on behalf of the Queer Coalition), Deirdre Lutz, Carol Place, Kym Register, Cris Rivera, Sallie Bingham Center for Women's History and Culture at Duke University, Steve Schewel, Allan Troxler, and Jaye Vaughn. The materials reflect the activism of the LGBTQ community of Durham and the Triangle area and concern primarily the following events: the April 12, 1981, Little River beatings and aftermath; the 1986-1988 Gay Pride marches, the 1986 push to recall Mayor Wilbur "Wib" Gulley for proclaiming a week dedicated to anti-discrimination and the LGBTQ community's campaign against the recall, the 1993 March on Washington, and the 2012 protests against Amendment One, which proposed to make same-sex marriage unconstitutional in North Carolina. They consist of newspaper clippings from such publications as the Durham

Morning Herald, the New York Times, the Independent Weekly, The Front Page, and Indy Week; photographs; videos of events; oral histories; meeting files; flyers; scrapbooks; and posters.
