Biographical/Historical Note:	Little River school opened in 1934 to serve African-American students in grades one through twelve in northern Durham County. It was the first large consolidated school for black students, following the founding of smaller Rosenwald schools in prior years. The building burned down in 1939, but was rebuilt. It later became an integrated elementary school when Durham county schools integrated in the late 1960s, then closed in 1993 when the city and county school systems merged. The former campus became a community center, while Little River Elementary School reopened the same year on Snow Hill Road.
