| Biographical/Historical Note: | Located in southeast Durham, Shepard Middle School opened as a junior high school in 1964, serving 507 students in grades 7-9. It was named for Dr. James E. Shepard Jr., founder and first president of North Carolina College (now North Carolina Central University.) James M. Schooler, its first principal, served until 1970. In the 1970s enrollment declined, as urban renewal lured many residents out of the city school district lines into the county district. In 1975 the ninth grade class was incorporated into the city high schools, and in 1982 the school was converted to a middle school along with the city's other junior high schools, housing grades 6-8. With the merger of city and county schools and subsequent changes to the school system, Shepard Middle School became an International Baccalaureate magnet school in the 1995-1996 school year. | |
